Tony and Chuck have been music collaborators for many years, having written and recorded dozens of songs together through several decades as the nucleus of the Renaissance Man Band (RMB). After about 10 years of separation this team of songwriters now living in different states was brought back together and able to collaborate using a new cloud-based recording studio. This new technology is opening the doors and opportunities for song writers around the world. The RMB music style brings together the musical sensibility of the best years of rock and roll with the sensibility and themes of our time.

The name for the band was gifted to the band by Kate Coleman, a wonderful local writer for a newspaper in Hagerstown Maryland. Kate interviewed the members of the band and believed (as she wrote in her article) that the members had many talents or areas of knowledge. As such she thought we were much like “The Renaissance Man”. We liked the idea and the name and agreed. It was fitting as we all got together once a week religiously after long hectic work weeks at our day jobs.

Once we started rehearsing and writing music each week, the hour or two we worked together was all about music and no one talked about work. It was a form of Zen meditation.

We soon found that the band was in demand for live performances. We toured locally for many years but always found ourselves drawn back to the studio. The love of writing and producing music was always the driver of the band.

RMB creates music based on real life, real experiences and real feelings, real not (AI) intelligence. We're real musicians with real effort and real heart and soul being put into each song.

Chuck Idol has a very unique style of writing most of the music in open string tuning. Tony draws his inspiration from his many unique life experiences.

We hope that you enjoy this latest release.
